

Privacy Policy

Revised as of February 10, 2025

TOG Research Corporation (D/B/A Olinger) – Background

Olinger (hereafter as “we” “our”) is a market research company that conducts our research studies through the use of telephone, online, mobile, or in-person data collection.

We believe in and respect your privacy and the sanctity of the information you may provide to us. As members of the Insights Association, we adhere to the Code of Standards, including strict privacy regulations in market research, set forth by the Insights Association. Additionally, we have received ISO 27001 certification, meaning that we follow rigorous business practices and procedures for data security.

This privacy policy is intended to explain our policy for collecting, storing, using, and sharing personal information collected during participation in our studies. Additionally, the policy will disclose how you, as a study participant, may find out about your personal information on file, how to correct or change it, and how to opt-out of any panels that you have opted-in to.

This policy applies the following means of collecting personal information:

- Information collected during participation in one of our studies
- Information collected from filling out a request for contact on our website www.olingermr.com

NOTE: If you are under the age of 13, you may not use any of our services, our site, or participate in any surveys.

We may occasionally make changes or additions to this policy. We will update the policy as necessary at our discretion. These changes will be placed in the policy and will apply to all collection, use, and sharing of personal information after the changes are made. We will notify the public of major changes via a prominent announcement on our website, and on the top of our policy. Additionally, we will contact panel members through email (previously provided to us) for substantial changes. We will use personally identifiable information in accordance with the privacy policy under which the information was collected.

Information for EU, UK, and Swiss Citizens

Olinger complies with the EU-U.S. Data Privacy Framework DPF, the UK Extension to the EU-U.S. DPF, and the Swiss-U.S. DPF as set forth by the US Department of Commerce, regarding the collection, use, and retention of personal information transferred from the European Union and the United Kingdom and/or Switzerland, as applicable to the United States. Olinger has certified to the Department of Commerce that it adheres to the DPF with respect to such information. If there is any conflict between the terms in this privacy policy and the DPF Principles, the DPF Principles shall govern. To learn more about the DPF and to review our self-certification, please visit <https://www.dataprivacyframework.gov/s/>. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has jurisdiction over Olinger's compliance with the DPF.

Olinger has certified that it adheres to the DPF Principles of Notice, Choice, Accountability for Onward Transfer, Security, Data Integrity and Purpose Limitation, Access, and Recourse, Enforcement and Liability. If there is any conflict between the policies in this privacy policy and the DPF, the DPF Principles shall govern. To learn more about the IA DPF Services program, and to view our self-certification page, please visit Data Privacy Framework.

Information for California Residents

If you are a California resident, starting January 1, 2020, you have a right to notice of our collection of consumer personal information, as defined in the California Consumer Privacy Act of 2018, Civil Code §1798.100 et seq. (CCPA). This Notice is to provide you with information regarding our collection of consumer personal information. All terms are used in this Notice as defined in the CCPA or applicable regulations thereunder.

Subject to certain exceptions and limitations, personal information is any information that directly or indirectly identifies, describes, relates to, is capable of being associated with, or can reasonably link to a particular consumer or household. For individuals within the State of California, you instead have the right:

- To request from Olinger access to your Personal Information that Olinger collects, uses, discloses, or sells (if applicable) about you.
- To request that Olinger deletes Personal Information about you.
- To opt-out of the sale of Personal Information, if applicable.
- To non-discriminatory treatment for exercise of any of your data protection rights.
- In case of request from Olinger for access to your Personal Information, for such information to be portable, if possible, in a readily usable format that allows you to transmit this information to another recipient without hindrance.

What personal information do we collect in our surveys?

We collect the following types of information and limit our collection to what is relevant for our research purposes:

A. Personal Information:

Personal Information pertains to any information that is identifiable to you. This may include your name, phone number, mailing address, email address, and demographic information.

B. Log Files

Like many websites, we collect log files. Log files include information that is gathered from your web browser. This information includes internet protocol (IP) address, operating system, browser type, internet service provider (ISP), date and time stamp, and completion times. We aggregate this information to analyze current trends, track changes, and ensure technological compatibility. This information is never stored with personally identifiable information beyond any one survey.

C. Cookies:

We use cookies only in certain surveys. Cookies are mainly used in password-protected surveys. We use persistent cookies, small files that are stored on a participant's browser for the convenience of our participants. The only purpose of these cookies is to allow a participant to reenter an already begun survey at the point where they left off, rather than start over. We do not use Session ID cookies.

D. Other Information:

We do not collect any other user information without explanation and consent from the participant.

How do we collect personally identifiable information?

We only collect participant information in our surveys through voluntary and lawful ways. The nature of the use of the information, which is never identified with the survey answers, will always be clearly displayed before asking for the information. We take reasonable steps to ensure that personal data is reliable for its intended use, accurate, complete, and current.

We may receive personally identifiable information from a client. This information has been previously volunteered by the participant and is only used for survey invitations and for determining appropriate questions to ask within a survey. This information will never be associated with the participant's answers and will never be returned to the client with any identifying information. Agreements between us and our clients ensure that personally identifiable information is not shared with the clients or outside parties and will never be used for any purpose (including sales transfers) without the person's consent.

How do we use personally identifiable information?

The use and purpose of collecting personally identifiable information will be revealed at the time consent is received for collecting the information.

One of the most frequent reasons for collecting personally identifiable information is to distribute incentives or rewards for a survey. This information is only used to contact the winner or distribute earned incentives. It is removed from the survey data at that time and destroyed.

Information such as email address may be collected for opting into participation in a panel or future surveys. In this case, the participant has consented to our contacting them via email for future survey opportunities. Email addresses may be used as a unique identifier or password for security purposes, but only when legally available from a responsible source or in opt-in cases.

Personally identifiable information may be collected to verify the participant is in fact who they say they are. This is applicable if we possess some information prior to the survey, possibly from a client list, or from opting-in to provide information in a previous survey.

If personally identifiable information is supplied to us by a client, we may provide a list of those who have completed, started but not finished, or have not started surveys, without identification of any survey answers. Additionally, this information may be displayed at the aggregate level in association with survey results. This would not be done in such a way as to disclose any other personally identifiable information or allow anyone to match answers to participants.

Other reasons for collecting personally identifiable information include use in the aggregate. For example, collecting zip plus four or street address information to retrieve census information about a particular geographic area.

Will we ever share, sell, or disclose any personally identifiable information? No.

We will never share personally identifiable information without your permission, and we acknowledge our potential liability under the DPF in cases of onward transfer. We will never sell any personally identifiable information to anyone.

If personally identifiable information was provided by a client, we may allow the client who took the survey to know. This generally only applies when the client is dispersing survey invitations. This includes information that is not attached to survey responses and is simply the information that was already provided to us from the client. As the participant has already given consent to the client to obtain this information, we are respecting the participant's privacy.

We may use a third party to invite survey participants or to award prizes to contest winners. Third party vendors may include online community management software, such as Higher Logic, that use electronic methods (e.g., email) to invite participants and/or inform contest award winners. However, these intermediaries may not use users' personally identifiable information for any other purpose.

We may be required to disclose personal information in response to a lawful request by public authorities, including to meet national security or law enforcement requirements.

What safeguards do we take to protect personally identifiable information?

We implement numerous restraints and safeguards to protect user privacy. These include technological, organizational, and physical security measures. These restraints protect user information from being obtained, viewed, or used by unauthorized persons. We maintain a secure password-protected server with limited and monitored access. Passwords are changed frequently for a higher level of security. Only a few employees – those who need access - are allowed to view personally identifiable information. Additionally, personally identifiable information is dissociated with survey responses whenever possible. This information is deleted when possible, as well; for example after a contest has taken place.

Survey information is password protected. Additionally, special software must be used to view survey results.

We are HIPPA compliant. This is most relevant for protected personal health information but applies when very sensitive personal information is collected, particularly health care information. Following HIPPA guidelines means that we take very strict precautions to protect sensitive personally identifiable information. Even higher precautions, such as encrypted email and closed-loop mail systems are in place for this level of sensitive information.

What about external links connected to our surveys?

If external links are associated with our surveys, we are not responsible for these external sources. This privacy policy only applies to material and information owned by us. We encourage users to check other's privacy statements before supplying personally identifiable information to other websites.

How can a user opt out of our services?

Users may choose to opt out at any time. Surveys are voluntary and the user may complete them at his or her discretion.

To conduct our market research studies, Olinger receives non-sensitive, anonymized information from third-party panel companies or clients. Survey participants may, at their discretion, choose to provide personally identifiable information. Such disclosure is purely voluntary.

However, to participate in contests or to be eligible for a prize, participants must provide their contact information.

A user may opt out of one of our panels at any time by emailing surveys@olingergroup.com.

Accessing personal information we hold about you

You have the right to access the personally identifiable information we hold about you. To correct, update, or delete information, please contact us at surveys@olingergroup.com or at the contact information below.

Confidentiality and Legal Issues

We take the utmost precaution in guarding personally identifiable information. Due to the insecurity of the internet and the transferring of information over the internet, networks, servers, hardware, or software that is not owned and operated by Olinger, we cannot guarantee absolute security of the information provided. Furthermore, in certain legal circumstances, where required by law, we may disclose personally identifiable information to comply with a court order, judicial proceeding, or legal process served to us.
